

Re: surrogate factoring eqns are wrong

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.math/2005-02/7197.html>

guenther.vonKnakspott_at_gmx.de

Date: 02/18/05

Date: 18 Feb 2005 15:52:39 -0800

rickO wrote:

> "Schweinkolben" <nospam@nospam.com> wrote in message
news:<3711qvF5fv3sqU1@individual.net>...
> > *These equations were previously published in the 1930's by Ivan
Melch, in a > > German book titled "Functions Theory" by Fischkopf Press. Melch has them as > > only a side note on page 137 as part of his derivation of the famous > > Gebratener Speck theory. Melch uses Z , a complex quantity instead of the > > oversimplified real number A . The equations were also shown to be irrelevant
> > for either surrogate factoring, or random number generation.
> >
>
> I've never heard of the "Fried Bacon Theorem". What does it say?
>*

Read the book. It is quite clearly written. I don't know the English translation of the term, but the metaphor relates to optimally frying bacon to a crisp without burning the fat, thus ensuring maximum lard gain, Melch is actually exposing great insights on Number Theory all the time. It is a fascinating read, the corollarys on factoring are just a minor part though.