

Re: JSH: Interesting behavior

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.math/2005-04/msg03394.html>

- From: Jim Spriggs <jim.sprigs@xx>
 - Date: Fri, 22 Apr 2005 22:23:17 +0000 (UTC)
-

Russell wrote:

>
> Jim Spriggs wrote:
>> jstevh@xxxxxxx wrote:
>>>
>>> ...
>>>
>>> He may no longer be in the same world as you and I, along with much > of
>>
>> "you and me" surely? It would be in British English at least.
>
> No. In this sentence, "as you and I are" is an implied clause > whose verb has been omitted. So the nominative case is correct.

You're right! Thank you for that.

>
> (Yes, many people who IMHO should know better do often say
> "x and I" instead of "x and me" in situations where the latter > is correct. One of my pet peeves! But this is not an example > of such.)
>

• References:

- ◆ JSH: Interesting behavior
 ◇ From: jstevh
- ◆ Re: JSH: Interesting behavior
 ◇ From: Russell

- Prev by Date: Re: (in-)homogeneous boundary conditions?
- Next by Date: Re: straight line formula
- Previous by thread: Re: JSH: Interesting behavior
- Next by thread: Re: JSH: Interesting behavior
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread