

Re: Question for EB

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.math/2006-12/msg00024.html>

- From: Ralf Bader <bader@xxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Wed, 29 Nov 2006 07:29:19 +0100
-

Eckard Blumschein wrote:

While all these utterances of mine were meant just like mild criticism, I still vehemently object against the German term ueberabzaehlbar and argued for "nicht abzählbar" (uncountable). I got aware that it came up just at the same time as Nitzsche lived very close to Cantor and coined the horrible term Uebermensch.

I told you a while ago that this ("...Nitzsche lived very close to Cantor") is wrong. Nietzsche came to Halle for medical treatment in the year before Cantor arrived there. I gave solid proof of this from sources like Curt Paul Janz' biography of Nietzsche. You, Mr. Blumschein, give solid proof here that even facts which are established beyond reasonable doubt don't impress you in the least in your weird world-view. Also, your babble about the prefix "über" which is just the German counterpart of "over" or "super" is still as stupid as it was last year. One needs übermenschliche (superhuman) self-control in order not to bite into the table-top when reading your nonsense.

.