

Re: JSH: End of an error

---

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.math/2006-12/msg03066.html>

---

- From: "Tim Peters" <tim.one@xxxxxxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Sat, 9 Dec 2006 16:39:50 -0500
-

[Tim Peters]

...
James has always been trying to protect top mathematicians. Top mathematicians have never been to blame. Oceania has always been at war with Eurasia.

[Jesse F. Hughes]

Wow. Don't know how I missed that.

Neither do I: he's been pushing the current line of random bull on overdrive for two days ;-)

So, JSH is protecting top mathematicians these days. Because their lives are in danger. Somehow.

Lives are always in danger! This time top mathematicians aren't in mortal danger from mobs of outraged citizenry (although I take it sci.math posters still are), but are in danger of committing suicide when they come to understand that James is right. They have never been engaged in a conspiracy to suppress James's research, knowing it was right along. They're in danger of committing suicide when they discover for the first time that he's right. James has always been deeply concerned about this.

Got it. Thanks for the explanation!

No problem! Oceania has always been at war with Eastasia.

"But regardless of my goofs, my reality of journals is different from ANY of yours, as they just treat me in a special way."
— James S. Harris

Re: JSH: End of an error

Ooh! Ooh! A new regurgitated JSH-ism! Those are a great public service. I sure hope you didn't miss this one, perhaps my favorite of the year so far:

"And a vanity journal wouldn't open the doors to some unknown."

.