

Re: difference

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.math/2007-03/msg05681.html>

- From: mathman <mathnucl@xxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Wed, 28 Mar 2007 16:42:25 EDT
-

Sorry, I am new to logical induction, a little problem popped up as follows,
A differs from B because $A = \sim B$
if A, B are sets, some members in A are not in B
then, can conclusion $A = \sim B$ is incorrect,
what is the relation of A and B ?
Thanks

Your description is very confusing. Specifically, what are you given and what are you trying to prove?

.