Now, maybe he said that somewhere else, but I sure don't recall it.

So when you just said in this very thread and very recently:

"I remember Jackson's contributions"

you were lying.

No, sir. I remember Jackson's contributions. I remember nothing like you described. I searched to see if my memory was consistent with the record. As far as I can tell, it is.

You have a funny notion of lying.

More than that, you were talking out of your ass. And since you were speaking from memory, you have shit for brains. Ipsa facto, res ipsa loquitur, QED, voila, and ta da! Or even modus ponens (right Fernando?).

Of course, maybe my memory is faulty.

No kidding.

Why not prove me wrong?

Because you allege to know the truth, but YOU CAN'T BACK IT UP!

Here's what I said.

I remember Jackson's contributions. I don't recall that he *ever* claimed that JSH's paper must be correct.

I have not found any evidence that he said what you claim. Seems to me that if you were telling the truth, you'd provide some proof.

Look at you! You talk from "memory", then backpedal very very quickly. And you doubted your own memory by searching feebly, finding nothing, and giving up. Tsk tsk.

No backpedaling. What I said was correct. I don't recall anything like you report and I haven't seen any post to that effect during my brief search.

You can't even admit (or remember?) that Quinny–whinny of the Mega–Bullshit IQ Foundation used that intellectually dishonest "closed list" excuse to protect his buddy James Harris. He's Quinn Liar Jackson.

Wow. Very clever!
