You think the administrators of Math Forum at Drexel could "fix the educational system"? You are indeed hallucinating.

The administration could fix their own mess (at least) never mind about the educational system at large or other newsgroups such as Google.

Thus they could request more information from you and others for the unique existence issue.

I know that their hiring practices in math department are also questionable.

Someday, I may address these issues from more authoritative point of view!
