

Re: Canadian doctors coming to the US

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.cardiology/2004-08/2712.html>

From: Robert (RobertJ_at_hotmail.com)

Date: 08/28/04

Date: Fri, 27 Aug 2004 21:27:14 -0700

"Steve Harris sbharris@ROMAN9.netcom.com" <sbharris@ix.netcom.com> wrote in message news:79cf0a8.0408271437.492111bc@posting.google.com...

> "Lictor" <ghostmlNOSPAM-REMOVE@online.fr> wrote in message news:<412ee3d2$0$2105$79c14f64@nan-newsreader-05.noos.net>...

> > "George Conklin" <nilknoc@earthlink.net> wrote in message > > news:sXsXc.13795$2L3.13420@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net...

> > > Which is why many countries have a ban on advertising drugs outside of > > > specialized magazines. Seeing all the ads for various drugs (mainly > > AIDS)

> > > was quite a surprise while visiting the USA, and actually quite a > > shocking

> > > one.

> > >

> > > Why were you shocked?

> >

> > It just felt terribly wrong, it's hard to pinpoint exactly why. What I felt > > was around the lines of immoral, unethical, obscene. I mean, ads telling me > > how great it is to live with AIDS while on drug X, and that you are able to > > climb mountains and all, do feel obscene to me. A subway station is not the > > place to take decisions on a matter of such vital importance as to what drug > > you will literally bet your life on if you have AIDS. That's a decision > > that should be taken in the privacy of a doctor's office, with the > > counselling of a neutral practitioner. These ads negate that special > > relationship. They're trying to sell life and death like they would sell > > chocolate bars or soap. And knowing to what level of disinformation the food > > industry can go to sell products, I can't help but wonder at the quality and > > neutrality of the information in drug ads.

> > It felt just as wrong as ads for tobacco or alcohol products, another thing

- > > we have a ban on.
- >
- >
- > I've got some shocking news for you, you poor dear innocent things.
- > The decision of what particular drug you take for your illness is in
- > many cases a lot like the decision of what kind of food to eat, or car
- > to drive. The food and the car can kill you also, if you choose
- > "wrongly." But that's part of being an adult, n'est-ce pas vrai?
- > Unless you are Canadian.
- >
- > And now, next tell me. I've heard that in the US, it is money
- > interests that rule the government. And that this is not so in other
- > countries, such as (for example) that utopia of Canada. But you must
- > tell me of this miraculous thing!
- >
- > SBH

They have a very simple answer and that is put everything under the government and all the problems go away.