Speaking as one who is well versed in physics, lifting something is defined by both frame of reference and exerting an opposing force that exceeds a gravitational force.

Our heavenly Father is creator of everything, the universe, the natural laws of the universe, and time. He unifies all the forces of the universe. Such an incredible omnipresent, omniscient, omnipotent Entity is greater than any frame of reference or force in this universe. A frame of reference can be chosen to define the movement of us mere mortals who are infinitesimally smaller than Him. There is no such frame of reference for God. He is simply too big and too all encompassing and too all powerful.

Truth is simple.

Actually, understanding what I just wrote requires only a basic understanding of simple physics.

It seems you have no ability to discern the truth.

You remain in my prayers, dear neighbor whom I love.

May you accept Christ as your personal Lord and Savior, someday, so that you too will escape satan's rule and torment of your soul after you die.

Servant to the humblest person in the universe,

Andrew
