

Re: Dr. Chung posts

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.cardiology/2004-10/2192.html>

From: Barry (pilbaradingo_at_ozemail.com.au)

Date: 10/28/04

Date: Thu, 28 Oct 2004 11:52:36 +1000

Hello Erin,

Well said. I agree with your sentiments, but will not "sign-off" indefinitely. Certainly I will avoid the agenda being set upon us by a couple of fanatics. As I have stated in recent posts, I am not a Christian, but respect Andrew's beliefs, and have never been offended by his words or actions. On the contrary, I am grateful for his constructive presence in the group. I am ashamed to be an atheist !!!!

Regards, Barry

"erin" <antsypants5555@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:7c82f302.0410270724.44d47239@posting.google.com...

> Lately, everytime I come into to this newsgroup expecting to read some > valuable information, I see these threads and posts about Dr. Chung > and his christian beliefs. Granted, I may not agree with his > christian viewpoint or rhetoric, but at least it's nice to know > there's a medical professional who cares enough to devote a chunk of > his time to respond to posts. I don't think he has an ulterior motive > as some of you alledge. Let's see his practice is somewhere in > Atlanta. Let's see that's about 3000 miles from my home. No, I won't > be Dr. Chung's new patient anytime soon. You guys need to chill out > or go find another sandbox to have a fight. I'm siging off this > newsgroup indefinitely because I'm sick of the constant bickering > lately.