

Re: FDA, User Fees, Adverse Effects, and Safety

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.cardiology/2005-03/1268.html>

Hawki63_at_sbcglobal.net

Date: 03/27/05

Date: Sun, 27 Mar 2005 18:27:30 GMT

again....not a valid comparison

this person was having PVC's PRIOR to starting on Paxil...

the article concerns difficulty coming off Paxil(which BTW is a known problem)..

cannot see the correlation....

"zee" <outrider@despammed.com> wrote in message
news:1111946407.841023.11640@l41g2000cwc.googlegroups.com...

>

> Jeff wrote:

>> "zee" <outrider@despammed.com> wrote in message

>> news:1111870262.277803.95930@l41g2000cwc.googlegroups.com...

>> >

>> > Jeff wrote:

>> >> "zee" <outrider@despammed.com> wrote in message

>> >> news:1111866431.096915.217960@z14g2000cwz.googlegroups.com...

>> >> > It is not unreasonable to think that a Prozac-altered physical >> >> > chemistry could be part of a chaotic mental state. Whether or > not a >> >> > prolonged QT (or anything) would "cause" suicide is a moot > point.

>> > (cardio)

>> >>

>> >> I disagree. Cardiac chemistry is below the neck; the mental state > is >> > above

>> >> the neck.

>> >>

>> >> You're reaching a bit too far.

>> >>

>> >> > Zee

>> >> >

>> >

>> >

>> >

>> > Cardiovascular includes vascular disease. No fire wall between the > body

>> > and brain. Just ask someone suffering from diabetes, or AFIB.
>>
>> Actually, there is. It is called the "Blood Brain Barrier."
>>
>> Besides, the functioning of the brain is independent of the electrical
>
>> rhythms of the heart.
>>
>> Jeff
>
>
>
> "...the functioning of the brain is independent of the electrical > rhythms of the heart."
>
> Tell that to this person.
>
> Premature ventricular contractions and paxil:
> <http://groups-beta.google.com/group/sci.med.cardiology/msg/c56564404212c073>
>