Who has the patent for a CoQ10 statin combo years ago?

The CoQ10 people were talking about it. I give you the link.
How did the statin drug pharms get the CoQ10 in the first place?
It was a joint venture. They got left out in the cold when the combo was not produced. They are sitting on the patent. It is not active. They are not making money out of all those sales being the most popular drug on the market. They write a letter to the FDA which states that you need the CoQ10 to make the drug BETTER. They don't say take the drug off the market because it is so dangerous.
The committee is not saying statins cause Parkinson's and the drug should be stopped because it's dangerous. They say the drug can be made better. They want their piece of the action.
Do you think the Q people will be happy with just selling it to PD patients?
Hell no.
Pharm companies are same no matter how big or small they are.
Give me a break. It has nothing to do with patents and everything to do with manufacturing.

Citations from the website, corporate sponsors. The entire conference is possible because of CoQ10 manufacturers.
