

Re: how to get a moderator on this group?

Re: how to get a moderator on this group?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.cardiology/2006-06/msg00411.html>

- From: jesshc@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx
 - Date: 18 Jun 2006 22:54:22 -0700
-

Marcia wrote:

Robibnikoff wrote:

<design1@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message \
snip

Okay, maybe I understand a little better. If you respond non-judgmentally, through acceptance you may eventually bring these poster's to Christ? I'm only trying to understand this from your perspective.

He has no "insight". He only wants to spam his bullshit where it's not wanted. Ask him why he constantly nym-shifts. While you're at it, ask him how many ISPs have dropped him due to numerous complaints.

He's not going to bring anyone to Christ – If anything, he's driving them away.

—
Robyn
Resident Witchypoo
Atheist Bastard Extraordinaire
#1557

I understand that others have a radically different perspective. I would prefer not to see these posts on sci.med and sci.med.cardiology, but I have no control of that. I'm not going to interfere with this any more.

Note the groups he's posting this crap to: sci.med.cardiology, alt.christnet.christianlife, alt.atheism, alt.christnet.evangelical.

Re: how to get a moderator on this group?

Re: how to get a moderator on this group?

He also frequently crossposts to a diabetes group and a cooking group. Do you suppose the people in smc, who are presumably looking for medical information and not religious indoctrination, appreciate this nonsense? He's been told repeatedly that he isn't welcome in alt.atheism. One funny thing is that he isn't as familiar with his bible as almost all the atheists he's annoying; for example, his bible tells him to "shake the dust from his feet as a testimony against us," and yet he keeps coming back. His bible tells him to pray in a closet, and yet he thinks it's a good idea to advertise. He isn't trolling to save people, he's trolling because he thinks it earns him points with his sky daddy.