Evidence that this is true?

It's common knowledge.

The use of a "proper newsreader" would tie someone down to the PC/Mac where Agent is installed with those personal settings concerning subscribed groups, handle, email address, password, etc. This would not be good for someone being cyberstalked.

How Agent is installed and configured is up to the user; it can be left wide open, can be left at the default settings, or buttoned up very tightly for the paranoid. BTW, aren't you aware that other newsreaders also have personal settings concerning subscribed groups, handle, email address, password, etc.?

Agent is being used here in a generic sense to represent an example of a "proper newsreader" because it was given as the example by Port.

And Agent cannot be used on a Mac, so that's simply another non-sequitur. OTOH, many Linux users do run Agent as their preferred proper newsreader.

Re: technical help needed

Actually you probably mean there is no MacOS version of Agent.

May GOD bless you in HIS mighty way (you will be hungrier when HE does).

May God remind you that you are not an authority on Agent or on newsreaders in general.

Did not claim that I were.

However, GOD did move me to help Marilyn successfully with her technical question about her use of a web-based newsreader.

You should have waited till you got the Word from the Holy Spirit. :-)

It was the Holy Spirit Who moved me to help Marilyn.

May GOD bless you in HIS mighty way making you hungrier than ever.

Prayerfully in Jesus' awesome love,
