

Re: Cardiologist too conservative?

Re: Cardiologist too conservative?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.cardiology/2008-05/msg00724.html>

- From: Truth <yamantaka@xxxxxxx>
 - Date: Fri, 30 May 2008 06:33:44 -0700 (PDT)
-

On May 30, 2:04 am, "Andrew B. Chung, MD/PhD" <lov...@xxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

<Chung Dung snipped>

Chung, earlier in this thread you attempted to address a clinical question. It's even in your field, cardiology. It was a basic exercise treadmill test question. And you proved to all interested readers that you are unable to give a reasonable answer. Instead of addressing the clinical points, you babbled on about demons and satan. You had a perfect opportunity to talk (or keyboard, since you're so concrete and literal) general information about stress tests, and you couldn't rise to the occasion.

You have again unwittingly proved that you are dishonest, mentally ill and not able to practice medicine up to minimum standards.

I have been told (or keyboarded since you're so literal due to your mental illness) by a reliable source that your case is being presented to the Georgia Medical Board when they next convene in June. This thread with your nonsense reply to a perfectly reasonable question about ETT may be of interest to the Board.

.