

Re: Cardiologist too conservative?

Re: Cardiologist too conservative?

---

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.cardiology/2008-05/msg00736.html>

---

- From: MU <moo@xxxxxxx>
  - Date: Fri, 30 May 2008 19:08:48 -0400
-

On Thu, 29 May 2008 22:35:11 -0700, Zen Cohen wrote:

Imagine that. You abuse Chung, then post to make sure he sees your gasps and fears, then you second guess your Urban Cardiologist.

I realize you'll never have the sense to fathom this but Andrew is a diseased shell of a doctor who gives advice that is patently dangerous to everyone but fellow loons like you. Get it? Of course not.

Got it and its a lie. just as you are, a lie in a human body. A pathetic git.

Think what you like and trust what you want, but when you blunder through the door with a chip on your shoulder claiming something's is so, and you are blatantly and purposefully incorrect, especially when I know Chung, expect some of the people sitting in this Usenet room to snicker and point out that big piece of toilet paper hanging off your shoe.

BTW, by "Urban Cardiologist" do you mean one who actually graduated from med school and can hold a license to practice? What kind of docs do dumb hicks like you see in Hooterville?

I don't know. I don't live in Hootersville.

Excellent counterpoint, you really hit all the high spots. Is this sort of dialogue considered incisive debate in your circles or merely witty banter in your kiddy-boi world, you whining little smudge of poo-poo?
lol
.

Re: Cardiologist too conservative?