Why does a person feel so different after cardio-pulmonary arrest and resuscitation? Is it:

The shock of the difibrillator?

The clotting and unclotting of the blood?

The drugs?

The lack of oxygen?

The trauma of the chest compressions?

The collapse and re-opening of the vessels?

The immune response?

Other reasons?

My body survived this after it was used at a research hospital to make money on May 25th, 1997. Now I get shit medical care and I am tired of it. The hard parts are there...they just don't function properly due to some kind of mitochondrial dysfunction. I want to fix this. I want to work, play, dance and ride. I am sick of Chronic Fatigue Syndrome and I want real answers. Dr. Paul Cheney has told us sufferers that CFS victims are lucky because CFS is not a disease but is a protective mechanism that keeps us from dying. People don't die of CFS, they die of cardiomyopathy caused from mitochondrial dysfunction. I want to get my little power houses functioning. He said that injection of umbilical cord stem cells should fix the DNA damage and allow the mitochondria to work again. It has something to do with the brain stem and I need help finding out just how to get this treatment.

Today I pray for and remember the "little nobody" who snuck me 2 x-rays of my infant sons whole body. One showing both clavicles broken and his guts up in his chest and the other showing how these were covered up. Thank you and God bless you for telling me to hide them and to NOT BRING THEM BACK. I heard your fear and I read your eyes. Sorry I was so stupid to not understand what you tried to tell me. You are one of my angels helping me to do what God has chosen for me to do. I love you.

Love and Truth, Laura Lynn (Halvarson) Stanbery

In loving memory of Fairpuzzled
