Right! From the tone of your post it seems that I'm also involved in this conspiracy. Like I said earlier, you don't fool me.

I don't care to fool anybody. I am just trying to tell the truth.

Really?

What's this then: "THE PATIENT WHO REFUSED TO DIE" ????????????????

Good grief. Are you always such a drama queen or do you actually believe that medical staff were out there trying to murder a patient (you)?

Re: THE PATIENT WHO REFUSED TO DIE. 08/01/08

I had perfect prenatal checkups performed by a licensed midwife. I had to have MORE testing than usual because of my age. I also had MORE testing than usual because routine midwifery prenatal care requires more tests than OB/GYN routine care as far as I was told. .

Extra monitoring is usually indicated when one is concerned about the placental position. Plus, advanced maternal age predisposes one to abnormal placental positioning. But I'm sure you know all this.

I had the ONE sonogram that is part of a NORMAL pregnancy no matter if a woman decides to have an OB or a midwife. I was not scheduled for any more sonograms because it showed I had a healthy, active perfectly formed son whom's placenta was attached at the TOP of my uterus. It was perfect therefore I was told I would NOT need another one. I have the report and the pictures.

I had a sonogram showing my son's perfect body with the placenta attached at the top of my uterus. My next prenatal appointment was to be May 28th when I was to receive a rhogam shot, (I am O negative blood type) along with regular measurements. I was supposed to get the shot on May 20th when I was there for my regular prenatal class but the midwife was running behind and suggested I come back the following week.

How many sonograms did you have in total. Did you miss any of the scheduled ones with the midwife?

SEE ANSWER ABOVE. I had ONE. There were no more scheduled because it was normal. I was told my age was NO concern because my health was better than some women in their 20's.

But being healthy doesn't mean one should be building fences and mixing concrete on a hot sunny day, especially when 27 weeks pregnant. It is not advisable.

The sonogram I supposedly got at Parkland shows the placenta attached near the opening of my cervix. This is all written in the physician signed document report that I possess, (which just last month I was told did not exist.)

So what you're essentially suggesting is that your placenta was not abnormally lying when you presented at ER, that you were not bleeding bright red blood, that your water did not break, that an ultrasound scheduled was cancelled by yourself, and this ghastly physician knocked-up a bogus report out of thin air?

I had NO RELATIONSHIP WHATSOEVER with Parkland before I got to the ER on May 25th, 1997. There was no ultrasound scheduled that I cancelled. I did not cancel anything.

Do you have any of this in writing or is it something you picked up over the phone when you were laughing and talking S-L-O-W-L-Y down to the privacy officer. I think you scared the poor woman. I hope you taped the conversation you had with her. It would be interesting to see if she did indeed state all the things you say she did, within inverted commas

I requested my records after I was released from Parkland after being there for 8 and a half days. I saw a sonogram report in it. I thought it odd because I did not remember getting a sonogram so I went to radiology to request the film.

Who told you this sonogram, which you apparently had no recollection of, would be stored on "film"?

Did the physician tell you to go to radiology and collect it?

I was given the run-around and finally I was told that no sonogram film exists for me.

What did the physician who did the report have to say about it? Surely he would have had recollection of the matter if you had enquired about it 8 and a half days after you left hospital. Of course you spoke to him???

As you say you have no recollection of a sonogram being done, do you remember all the other tests that were done?

Was any sonogram ever done that you have recollection of at Parkland?

I was also told that the only thing in radiology for me was a chest x-ray. I asked to see it and I waited. I was finally handed an envelope. I looked in it. It was empty. I told the man it was empty and he said he did not know where it was. He suggested it was missing and possibly a doctor had it.

Did you ask where the chest x-ray report was? Did you find out who ordered this X ray and what for?

How on earth do you account for your symptoms, then?

Based on my own research and recall of my symptoms, I think I probably had an abruptio or seperation of my placenta from my uterus. I also think I was probably bleeding internally from this seperation. I don't know this for sure because I was not diagnosed with an abruptio nor treated for abruptio.

If you were not diagnosed with an abruptio – nor treated for it – then it is most likely it wasn't an abruptio!!

You wrote "The sonogram I supposedly got at Parkland shows the placenta attached near the opening of my cervix" .

IMO, this sentence alone makes it sound very much like a placenta previa than an abruption.

Abruption refers to placental separation from the uterine wall. Your report clearly states placenta "attached" – so clearly no abruption. In placenta previa the placenta is implanted low; this is abnormal – but it still remains "attached" – causing other problems!

Forget my interpretation of one line of your sonogram report – but why didn't you go to the hospital with a copy of the sonogram and discuss with the physician that reported on your scan, instead of doing your "own research" and speculating on what you think the diagnosis was. What are you afraid of, really?????? I find it odd that you did not have any discussion with the doctors and had to resort to researching on your own. I have noticed that you tend to be rather economical with the truth. Care to tell what the physicians really told you?

IMO, any reasonable person would have in the first instance wanted to discuss with the doctors instead of going and asking for "sonogram films" and "x-ray films". Very odd, don't you think?

I just remember how I felt and it fits the symptoms of abruptio. I don't think I caused the abruptio. I know Parkland did not cause it. It just know that I had NO signs of symptoms of pre-eclampsia at any of my check-ups. My friends and family even commented on how I had NO swelling in my feet. One of my friends even teased me and said, "You're such a bitch...my feet swelled up as soon as I was pregnant and here you are 5 months pregnant and not even showing any signs, even your feet look skinny...you have hardly gained any weight!" I think I gained about 10 pounds. I do know that the shirt I wore to Parkland was my first maternity shirt and it was the first time I wore it.

"Ms. Stanbery, you did not have a sonogram at Parkland, you were scheduled for one but you cancelled it."

LIE...SEE ABOVE

I said, "I know I did not have a sonogram...I told ya'll that 11 years ago when I saw the bogus sonogram report in my records. I asked back then for the sonogram film and was told all I had was a chest x-ray in radiology.

Hang on, are you saying that you cancelled a sonogram that was indicated for you? Why would you do something like that?

SEE ABOVE. I had no relationship with Parkland WHATSOEVER before I got there on May 25th, 1997 in premature labor. How could I have anything scheduled before then?

Well, what date was the scan scheduled for according to them. Who was the physician that ordered it; what were the indications for this scan? Was it the same physician? Did you contact that physician? If not, why?

I was handed an empty film jacket and was then told that the film was missing. I was alarmed when I saw the bogus sonogram report because it said Barret had no kidneys and I knew he had kidneys because they were seen on the sonogram ordered and performed at the midwife clinic. The Parkland "privacy officer" tried to convince me once again, (just a month ago) that I did not have a sonogram at Parkland therefore I have no sonogram report. I had to laugh...she was not laughing. I laughed as I told her that she was mixing up her lies and getting confused. I told her S-L-O-W-L-Y so she could understand that I have the report of the sonogram which was NOT performed which she is now saying was never performed due to cancellation. She once again tried to tell me that I don't have what I do have...I don't see what I do see. She asked me to bring it to her, in fact I could mail it to make it easy on me. I just laughed when she told me to bring it to her or mail it....OK I will get right on that....AS IF.

Well, why didn't you send them a copy of the report? Perhaps it had a reference number etc. on it that would have aided them to look into it better and advise you?

The above conversation just happened within the last month. I am concerned only with getting proper medical care for myself now and don't have time for Parklands legal team and their silly shit. I realized when she said argued with me that there is NO WAY I have a sonogram report from the night I got to Parkland....That arguing with her about it was like pissing in the wind. I have the bogus report and sending it to Parkland is a waste of my time because they can't have an explanation for it other than another LIE.

I found medical studies that show fetuses with no brain or kidneys are considered non-viable. One wonders what is considered O.K to do to a non-viable fetus.

I had no bad symptoms until the very day I went to Parkland. I was helping to build a fence and it was the first real hot day of the summer. I did not feel right. I went in the house to cool off and have a drink of water. I tried to lay down. I went back outside to mix concrete in the wheelbarrow...I had to stop again.

Which babybook advised you to be building a fence and mixing concrete at the time? Perhaps if you had not been doing any of the above you would have just been fine, don't you think?

My husband at the time was doing the heavy work. He put the sackrete in the wheelbarrow and I stood there with the water hose and put water in the wheelbarrow. I then used a hoe to slowly mix small bits of the dried sackrete into the water. It was not strenuous exercise. I was not carrying the sacks or the wheelbarrow. I was helping but I was not doing the heavy work that I normally would have done had I not been pregnant.

You're very intent on blaming others for what happened but are not prepared to take any share of blame. Do you honestly think you had no role to play, at all? Perhaps this is your way of dealing with the issue and guilt. This is perfectly understandable, however, blaming others and trying to grab money won't get you anywhere!! Your case has no merit, this is why no one has taken it up. Has that ever occurred to you? I know you hate me for telling you this but it's time you get a reality check!

That is your opinion.

Re: THE PATIENT WHO REFUSED TO DIE. 08/01/08

I tried to eat
a bit of lunch...couldn't eat. I tried laying down again.
Restless, that is what I was. I became concerned because restless is bad in animal behaviour which I DO know something about. I tried to relax and do breathing exercises. By late afternoon I started to have a twinge of cramps. I could not tell if they were stomach or uterine related. I felt a bit ill.. it felt like menstrual cramps. I called my midwife and told her that I had a slight spotting of brownish colored discharge. She told me to take a warm bath and relax. She said if the pain got worse or if I see red blood to go immediately to the ER and don't stop to call her until I get there. The pain got worse in spite of the bath and I begin to plan what to do.

It seems to me you actually realized the gravity of the symptoms.

I figured out I was about 28 weeks pregnant and my baby books said that there was a chance of survival at that age so I contemplated my options. I live in a rural area. The closest 2 ER'S are about 25 minutes away
in two different directions.
I had recently read in the Dallas Morning News that Parkland had a special unit called a NICU that saved babies that may have not lived if they were not in a tertiary level 3 hospital and that preemies were transported there from other hospitals that did not have these special units. I remembered this pull-out special Sunday feature because it pulled on my heart strings when I read it. The day
I read it was the first time I ever heard anything about

Re: THE PATIENT WHO REFUSED TO DIE. 08/01/08

preemies and I was shocked to learn preemies were so prevalent. Like always, I thought of animals, (my passion and education is about animals) and I thought something is wrong with humans somehow because it is VERY RARE and VERY INDICATIVE of bad environment or injury if a farm animal has a spontaneous
early delivery of a NORMAL fetus.
I made the decision at that time to go directly to Parkland...a 40–50 minute drive on a Sunday night. I thought it would be best to go there and ask for help to stop the labor because according to the newspaper article he would get top care in the NICU if he did come early.

Quick decision you made to go to Parkland.

My bogus medical records have me bleeding bright red blood when I got there...LIE. I was still spotting slightly.

Well, you were spotting at home, according to you. However, in the 45 minutes it took for you to get to hospital, don't you think you would have bled some more? The fact is that you were bleeding and had pain that was worsening. You did not have a massive bleed.
However, you were bleeding and this would have been more apparent to the person that examined you than to yourself.

I was on white sheets and dressed only in a gown. I was aware and I KNOW I was not bleeding any color blood heavily.

They examined me...They told me I was fully effaced but only 1–2 cm dilated. They said they would try to stop the labor but they did not seem too hopeful.
They also told me that they would be forced to do an emergency c-section

if my water broke. My records state I presented with spontaneous rupture of membrane...LIE. They kept telling me that Barret was not in distress. I kept asking why I was in premature labor.

Several known causes for premature labor exist, however, of note is: PROM , another is antenatal bleeding.

I did NOT have PROM, (premature rupture of membrane)...This I know for sure.

I did have some spotting...rusty colored spotting.

Did you ask them why you were bleeding and what was causing the pain?

Yes...over and over and over....they said there was usually no explanation...it just happens. "Sometimes the babies just want to come out early." I heard that over and over. I argued with them and told them that my son was perfect therefore he should not be coming early unless something is wrong. I wanted to know what was wrong with his environment that being out was a better choice than being in. I still want to know that.

I wanted to know what I had done wrong because I had done everything I was supposed to do according to the midwife and all my books.

No midwife or book can guarantee anything. The good news is that you and your son are both alive today. How about being a little grateful for that? Most people would.

I am grateful to God that I am alive. I have no reason thus far to believe I should be grateful to Parkland or the doctors or the student doctors whom "cared" for me. I don't believe that I was properly diagnosed when I got there and I don't believe that I was properly treated for my premature labor. Period. That is my opinion. I also understand that it is possible that my son would have come early regardless of where I went for ER treatment. I was told by Parkland that if I would have had him vaginally his head would be crushed and he would have been dead. f

I had even stopped riding my beloved Fairpuzzled because the midwife said that horseback riding was one of the only activities she would not approve of. I walked her in hand instead....never thinking our relationship would change forever and we would never ride in a parade or jump again...that I would lose my good seat, (balance)
forever.
IN MEMORY OF MY BELOVED FAIRPUZZLED. She gave me strength. A most honest horse whom was smarter than me but decided to befriend me
anyway. She is gone but her spirit is with me.

You certainly are concerned with discrediting me.
I have to wonder why you choose to do that rather than accept the truth. It is what it is.

"Money is the only thing that will buy stem cells. Money is the only thing that will undo the destruction done to my life and put me in the place I would have been if I had not been victimized. Money will buy trustworthy counseling for me and my family so that this medical misadventure will not ruin my family for generations. I hope also that money will buy back some of my privacy."

I like the line about money buying privacy back...

I'd ditch that entire para off the blog if I were you. It will surely work against you...

Re: THE PATIENT WHO REFUSED TO DIE. 08/01/08

I want proper medical care which I believe is available somewhere on this planet.

You're asking for exceptional treatment! God might be able to help with that?

I believe, with proper medical care, I could be a normal, active person and go on with my life. I also believe way too much money and resources have been used covering up my case. I could have used that money to get proper medical care which I think involves stem cell therapy. Simple.

I note you're a devout Christian, so would suggest you continue praying to God and ask for a miracle to happen?

Or are you only after $$$$ ???

Bye.
