

Re: Brite Smile isn't worth the money

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.dentistry/2004-06/0269.html>

From: Rich (sooperdooper_pooperscooper__at_cox.net)

Date: 06/05/04

Date: Sat, 5 Jun 2004 15:59:28 -0700

I second this. I had a $500 "Zoom!" job done. It was hydrogen peroxide and a UV light (I think). Took 30 minutes and my teeth were 10,000 megawatts brighter for ONE WEEK. Then back to the same old color again. What a joke. Well, I guess it's good if you have a wedding or something the next day but that's about it. Just rinse with peroxide and go smile into the sun for 30 minutes (of course your gums might get sunburned).

--

Remove _pooperscooper_ from email if you reply

"JCS" <jcsteding@comcast.net> wrote in message
news:9f6f22f8.0406050837.10d76014@posting.google.com...

> I had the Brite Smile procedure done on February 9 of this year and my > teeth were very white initially. The dental technician told me they > were 12 shades lighter than before. By the end of February they were > already yellowing again and now they are as yellow as they were before > the whitening. I know that because I have crowns on some back teeth > that didn't whiten and now the rest of my teeth match them again. I > would not recommend it to anyone. It's a waste of hundreds of dollars.