The tinyurl link, I believe, is from one of joel's posts.

Its redirects you to microsofts site. I know you can go to tinyurl.com, and make your own url. A url is like <http://www.google.com>.

You can take a really long url, like the microsoft link, and shorten it down to something really small, and easy for people to remember, and the link wont take up so much space in a post.

Thats what the tinyurl service does. Its free, and you can take a really long url and shorten it down. Its a redirector service.
