Why? You gave us plenty of information.

I didn't ask, but your ex may richly deserve the grief that you are trying to give him. I did not need to ask because the real issue here is that you are using your daughter and other innocent bystanders as weapons against him. My opinion remains unchanged even if you don't happen to like it: Work things out with your ex. and in any case do not incorporate your daughter and other innocent ar the same, particularly in regard to your mutual child.

Vaughn

Working things out with the ex-husband obviously has not worked in the past otherwise we wouldn't be in this position with our children.

Should the girlfriend, ex and the orthodontist and myself spoken before any procedures were completed there would be an agreement in place.

In regards to "using" our daughter thats not my style nor my intent.

The orthodontist has a responsibility to both parents or legal guardians in any case that involves a child. Informing the parent/legal guardian about the risks involved with any procedure before it is done...

I understand about acting in good faith. This applies to many parents
