I agree this is a legal problem, if your ex- signed for the treatment and had the authority, what can be the most you can hope for.

What is not clear is what would you like from the lawyer. Any tye of compensation?

Agreement in writing as to future treatment for any condition except emergency.

I would try to be ready with what I expect from legal advantages and the consequences if not followed.

I would also try to be agreeable with your daughter and ex if the treatment is completed and satisfactory. The state of the mouth should be primary as it is already done. Of course, the girlfriend was probably following orders or being accomodating in taking your daughter to the dentist, but had she thought further, would that type of situation suit her if it were her daughter and ex.
