

Re: need impression for dentures

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.med.dentistry/2006-05/msg00076.html>

- From: "Sdores" <sdores@xxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Wed, 3 May 2006 10:26:58 -0400
-

I had a car accident and my mouth doesn't open wide as it should. My dentures was made with the forming stuff put in and held in place until set and then removed by one end and rolled out. I hope this is clear. Maybe you can get someone to do it this way. UM MOM Susan, not a dentist. "need_help" <ssmeow@xxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message news:1146629205.668304.119170@xx

Hey, Joel. Did you see my previous inquiry about a scanner being developed in Japan that can get a dental impression without using the normal methods. I am the one that can't get my mouth open far enough for an impression. Have you looked into an alternative means to get an impressions? I am 58 yrs old. Am I to spend the rest of my life eating that soup, mashed potatoes and applesauce?

Also, to the twit that says that one should not look for a minority/female dentist or physician.....good thing you don't live near me or I'd give you good reason for needing dentures.
Moron.