

Re: Opinions on dentist conduct

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.med.dentistry/2008-10/msg00009.html>

- From: Simplicio <clintonz@xxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Fri, 3 Oct 2008 14:01:01 -0700 (PDT)
-

On Sep 29, 6:42 pm, New...@xxxxxxx wrote:

On Mon, 29 Sep 2008 11:58:37 -0700 (PDT), Simplicio

<clint...@xxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

Granted all jobs could in some respect be considered assembly-line work.

Another moronic and assinine statement.

Really?, all jobs involve producing a product, and payment is related to production of that product. Think of a screenwriter or an author like Stephen King who has to produce the next hit. Do you get payed to go on vacation?

What do you produce? Fillings, root canals,etc and you even have a drill just like an autoline worker.

Let's see wasn't there a discussion about how denistry evolved from barber shops earlier on this list. Can you see the assembly line aspect to hair cutting, or would you consider that a consulting job?