

Re: Progression? Late Stage Stomach Cancer.

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.diseases.cancer/2004-12/0305.html>

From: J (wristband_at_example.net)

Date: 12/24/04

Date: Fri, 24 Dec 2004 13:06:40 -0500

knews4u2chew@yahoo.com wrote:

- > That is not going to happen until the subject is incapacitated enough
- > so as not be able to ambulate and care for himself.
- > This is in the ultimate control of the subject.
- > The subject wants to live a normal life outside as long as possible and
- > is not interested in lieing a hospice waiting to die.
- > No doubt this will become necessary soon.

sigh..we've been over this, over and over.

hospice care can come to the home.

It can be a male or female nurse. They meet with the patient for an assessment and agreement as to how involved the patient wants them to be.

vomiting, pain, vomiting blood, perhaps bits of cancer and other tissue.

Pain, Weight loss, weakness, pain,

During the last week...<http://crossingthecreek.com/guts.htm>

but everybody dies differently, that's why it's best to have a nurse arrangement on call..