

Re: what to do where to look what to try

---

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.diseases.hepatitis/2006-05/msg00003.html>

---

- From: "eric" <1122snyder@xxxxxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: 15 May 2006 00:33:59 -0700
-

Bob, i was in viral research and have a friend who is a p.a and has had a transplant and im sure between he and i we can give you some help ..I had a near impossible hcv case to cure but with my lab background i was able to get it the 1st time even though it took me about 8 months to get a viral neg and did another 10 months 18 total to finish the hcv off and have now been neg for three years. It was a pretty simple task for those with an open mind and the med education helps alot too .So give me an e mail and we will all get together and get you some help .My p.a friend is very good with the transplant things since he has had one for 10 years and i am very good with the viral end. You can get me at 1122snyder@xxxxxxxxxxxx or on the forum here but what we are going to talk about are over most peoples heads so its your choice to do it here on the forum or through general e mail . This can be a very tricky virus to deal with and the odds and genotypes can be very deceptive . Sincerly ,Eric

.