

Re: "Geek Gone Mad"—Opening scene

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.diseases.lyme/2004-10/0018.html>

---

From: A_Weisman (a_weisman_at_yahoo.com)

Date: 09/30/04

Date: 30 Sep 2004 15:41:56 -0700

Greatcod@Yahoo.com (Greatcod) wrote in message news:<caef409e.0409271631.442b9905@posting.google.com>...
> *The sun rose over the satellite dish on the neighbor's mobile home, > and flooded the living room of Swegs' 1976 12 wide. His head was on > the keyboard of his computer. He began to wake. The foam from his lips > had dripped into the keys during his sleep. He rubbed his eyes, put on > his horn-rimmed glasses, and tried to get back on-line. He > couldn't—the spittle had frozen the keys, and paralyzed the mouse.
> He got up, and tucked his filthy T-shirt into his coffee stained > sweatpants. He walked slowly to the windows of the 12 wide, over the > bodies of dozens of insects that once were his pets?live healthy > beings destroyed by his increasing neglect of anything but his > obsession with trolling.
> At the window, he began to sob. "How could the God that makes > creatures
> as beautiful as the Borrellia make people as repulsive as those Lyme > Loonies?"
> He dried his eyes and reflected on his lost career. "I could > have won the Nobel Prize. Well, maybe I could'a got nominated. I > could'a been Somebody, I could'a been a Contender."
> He tried to think positive, like his Therapist had advised him.
> "I'll call Allen." In reality, even Allen didn't talk to him any more.
> Then he fell into a heap, on the floor, next to his beloved little > friends. Another day in the hellish existence of the once promising > micro-biologist had begun.*

Review: Lame, hackneyed, trite, juvenile, puerile.

Fishhead proves himself a hack yet again.

This is worse than the "poetry" of boob2221.

This is worth printing out. Best use: kindling for your next fire.

Other than that, skip it.