I once did an psychology (ethics) experiment on a few people.
I said: "If you had to choose between killing your child or Adolph Hitler, who would you kill".
Hitler.
Then: "If you had to choose between your child and a cockroach".
The cockroach.
"Your child and a dolphin"
The dolphin.
Then I asked: "Your child or all dolphins on Earth".
Usually they did not hesitate a second to deprive humanity from the dolphins (and exterminate an entire sentient species).
Pure egoism.
I proceeded with: "All animals on the planet or your child".
Often people would reply: "A difficult decision but I would choose to let my child live".

I was afraid to ask what they would answer to: "ten random foreign people or your child".

See, scum that likes to kill animals for personal gain is just that, scum. They have no ethics, they operate solely out of egocentric and egoistic motives.

People who would put the life of animals before the life of themselves or other people are SCARY.

They have no ethical limits. Their limit are limits of what they can get away with, what their power will allow them to do.
