

Re: it depends on what he means by "law"

Re: it depends on what he means by "law"

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.diseases.lyme/2005-07/msg00832.html>

- From: ted rosenberg <tedrosenberg@xxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sun, 17 Jul 2005 10:54:02 -0400
-

Sheesh

A typical ignorant twit who hasn't a CLUE what constitutes slander or libel.

lisasawitch wrote:

MicheleP wrote:

Proper complaints to agencies? You call "spinlyme@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx, scilyme@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx" proper agencies?

You don't scare me the least bit. Go ahead. get me for slander (which by the way Ms. Bionic Law, is defamatory assertion expressed in a transitional form of speech...

What? What is "transitional form of speech" ?

Where do you come up with this?

and it has to be a lie, that changes your impression of character.

Re: it depends on what he means by "law"

No that is very poorly stated.

Based on what I've seen here on the board, you are not held in high esteem - and it's probably due to your abrasive and ignorant character flaws.

Look in the mirror honey. There's a reason you were chased away from Lyment and there's a reason you've fought with everyone on all sides here. You might be a beauty pageant winner but as they said on Lyment, you probably didn't win miss congeniality.

How the heck would you know what I am saying??? LOL

Also, libel is much different. Libel means I am spreading lies about you to defame you.

No. Libel means you're spreading defamatory information in writing no matter what your intent. Intent is only an issue in cases involving public figures where the defamation needs to be shown to be made with malice or reckless disregard for the truth. In most libel cases your intent isn't at issue except if it is intentional there might be punitive damages.

Which I'm not. Number one, you defame yourself everytime - almost - you write.

I agree with that.

Re: it depends on what he means by "law"

Number two, Nothing of what I've stated is a lie.

So...sue away. I could use more publicity. LOL

ps. Maybe I'll shiver and hide behind Yale in court.

Now that was funny.

--

"...in addition to being foreign territory the past is, as history, a hall of mirrors that reflect the needs of souls observing from the present"

Glen Cook

.