If you want to be taken seriously, you should stop calling people names here. I am offended on K's behalf at the title of your post. Not that there is anything wrong with this lifestyle, IMO, but it is being used as a slur. This is obnoxious, and puts you in the class of persons who come to this newsgroup only to insult each other. I thought you were a better person than this.

I think that your suggestion of a lawsuit against the govt is the way to go too. They are determining the policy and enforcing it thru research funding to individuals and institutions. But I don't know how we would ever pull this off, if it is even possible. I have wondered if it would make any sense to include other large groups damaged by federal health policies and practices, such as GW vets, people with chronic fatigue, and autism victims. This would be one heck of a class action suit. I don't personally believe that any president had a hand in this. It is purely professional medical bureaucrats and their henchmen, in my opinion.
