yes, my thyroid is apparently fine. it's been constantly monitored for years, including for hashimoto's.

the only aberration on a recent blood screen was a significantly higher K+ level. I'm not sure what that means, I haven't bothered to look it up. I attributed the high level to excessive intake of gatorade over the very hot summer here and so I stopped drinking gatorade. they just screened my blood again to make sure that was the prob, I get the results in a couple of days.

How's the thyroid?

Been tested?

For antibodies, as well as TSH?
