Subject: NEJM and Bush's National Conflict of Interest Week

Date: Tuesday, October 17, 2006 13:27:31 [View Source]

Since Bush has declared this is National Conflict of Interest Week, and the head of the FDA got his butt toasted today for owning stock in the companies he was supposedly regulating, perhaps our good patriot No-Spin-O'Reilly can look into the matter of Gary Wormser at New York Medical College and the creeps at the Infectious Diseases Society of America sponsoring this "vaccine":

http://www.baxtervaccines.com/?node\_id=373

Which is a vaccine for an imaginary knee-only disease.

Been there, Done that.

Nobody ever proved you can turn a human into a walking cannister of tick disinfectant (that's truly the alleged mode of action).

Nobody ever proved rOspA prevented Borreliosis.

Here is Borreliosis:

<http://www.pnl.gov/energyscience/06-01/art1.htm>

"It's the perfect stealth bacteria," says one frustrated physician. He's talking about Borrelia burgdorferi, the bacterium that causes Lyme disease. This illness, which is often mistaken for diseases ranging from multiple sclerosis to Lupus, can inflict excruciating headaches and muscle pain, affect the brain and Persistent brain infection and disease reactivation in relapsing fever borreliosis.

Relapsing fever, an infection caused by Borrelia spirochetes, is generally considered a transient, self-limiting disease in humans. The present study reveals that murine infection by Borrelia duttonii can be reactivated after an extended time as a silent infection in the brain, with no bacteria appearing in the blood and spirochete load comparable to the numbers in an infected tick. The host cerebral gene expression pattern is indistinguishable from that of uninfected animals, indicating that persistent bacteria are not recognized by the immune system nor cause noticeable tissue damage. Silent infection can be reactivated by immunosuppression, inducing spirochetemia comparable to that of initial densities. B. duttonii has never been found in any host except man and the tick vector. We therefore propose the brain to be a possible natural reservoir of the spirochete. The view of relapsing fever as an acute disease should be extended to include in some cases prolonged persistence, a feature characteristic of the related spirochetal infections Lyme disease and syphilis.

Unless Jeffrey Drazen of the New England Journal of Medicine and the Mass Medical Society can prove to us that our brains are in our knees, or that the brain is made of cartilage, I think we have a decent case of RAMPANT SCIENTIFIC FRAUD and conflict of interest on the part of Gary Wormser's Kaiser Klan at New York Medical College.

just that this test would not have falsely qualified their bogus Lyme legal staff. His name is Kevin O'Connor. He got the job. And he is now the U.S. Attorney. "

He wid da Rowlandgate gangstas, like Jodi Rell.

"On another occasion, a sober Rowland adviser was deputized to warn another Republican she ought to start wearing underwear beneath her short skirts when she was around the governor. Mrs. Rowland was said to be especially insistent that the message be delivered."

"Connecticut's political world is tiny and given to ennui. Witness the fact that the U.S. Attorney, Kevin O'Connor, was barred from participating in the prosecution of the Rowland scandals because of his and his wife's close ties to the former governor. Kathleen O'Connor worked in the office of Rowland's legal counsel. In most places, that would raise an alarm. Connecticut only shrugs.
