I am recommended this very obnoxious information below

"You can't prove a lie."

about how there are no valid signs of illness in us'n chronic yuppie whineys and our neurotic children, when the fact is that the bad guys themselves discovered the very valid signs of illness in us,  but we are not allowed to have these tests performed. ***

In fact, that argument is 1/2 the RICO complaint. and the exact set of reasons Klempner's study was debunked:

<http://www.actionlyme.org/BIOMARKERS.htm>

Welp. As the 911 Scholars say, you can't prove a lie, but these assholes keep trying to whip out the psychiatric nonsense anyway.

When was the last time a psychiatrist was called to the ER to deal with head trauma?

http://www.actionlyme.org/PSYCHIATRIC_BS_UPDATE_13_AUG_06.htm

Since when do they actually fix broken brains? They don't have anything to do with actual brains and they vehemently reject the notion that they should. (Fine. Get a real job, then.)

Chronic Lyme is not "medically unexplained." It was only non-medically re-explained through the deployment of morons who claim the brain is a "complicating variable" and should therefore be thrown out of the equation. I am not exaggerating one bit:

"I have largely limited the discussion here to Lyme arthritis, the simplest case because the end point (no more arthritis) is so clear, and one does not have to introduce complicating variables such as the blood-brain barrier." --- Stephen Malawista, Yale University

http://www.rheuma21st.com/archives/Cutting_MalawistaLymeMay2000.html

If Yale University can publish in a scientific journal article that the brain is too complicated a variable to consider... then how can we be having a psychosomatic disease?

Anyone can publish any garbage and call it science in America and this is just plain funny, in my judgment. This is just like getting Michael Crichton to say to Congress that global warming is not real. A story teller. A dreamer. A man who admits to being a recovering hypochondriac, himself.

All that the State of CT has to do is get someone from the FDA and ask them if Yale has is a "scientifically valid method" in US Patent 5,618,533, and then they're all guilty of medical neglect and homicide on three continents. It's really that simple.

Expect more of a big push like this, because these crooks have every reason to be scared shitless of indictments and life in prison. Expect more of the same. That will simply be the evidence to the casual observer that they have something to hide.

Expect big old Jamboree and a Congressional Circle Jerk with all kinds of non-experts.

Expect them to offer $10,000 to anyone who can prove that Borreliae are not spirochetes, and that everything scientists all over the world reported that they found under a microscope for the last 100 years were hallucinations:

http://www.actionlyme.org/CHRONOLOGY_RICO.htm

Borreliae are technically, in bioweaponering lingo, "stealth disablers."

Bioweapons were the thing McSweegan obsessed over since the beginning of his "career." He's obsessed, but was left out of the loop of the real experts because he is crazy. No one at the NIH or the US Navy wanted to deal with him, so he bounced around from place to place, ragging and bitching about everyone else. <http://www.actionlyme.org/McSweegan.htm> <--Look at the number of things he was officially caught doing.
