

Re: discomfort after ejaculation

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.prostate.prostatitis/2004-06/0051.html>

From: ME (ME_member_at_newsguy.com)

Date: 06/15/04

Date: 15 Jun 2004 00:41:19 -0700

>>

>>How do you know?

>I was for many years involved in professional bodybuilding and ironman >competition.(Had to stop after sustaining severe injuries in an >automobile accident.)

>Virtually all the men I know who are still in competition training >have no male sexual or urinary tract problem, in spite of what doctors >say about anabolic steroids causing enlargement of the prostate etc...
>Most of these men used anabolics to maintain there testosterone levels >in their later years.

>Ask any endocrinologist/immunologist, male immune function and overall >vitality is linked to their testosterone levels.

>And while modern medicine can't explain completely why, supplementing >dropping levels with cyclic injections shows improved overall health >for most.

>Before I started showing symptoms of bladder/prostate problems my test >levels were all normal(13-18 ppm), which is high compared to >statistical index numbers. the reason I probably never had to use >anabolics during my competitive years.

>Around the third year into my ailments I had my doctor run a full >analysis/chem panel on my blood to check my levels.

>They'd dropped to under 5ppm of active testosterone in my bloodstream.

>And whether it's either causal or part of the symptoms one cycle of >Anathate reversed the chronic fatigue and the prostate pain.

>I'm not a doctor so can't render a actual medical opinion, just know >it worked for me while I took it.(Had to go to a sports medicine >doctor to get it, very expensive. My regular doctor wouldn't even >consider doing it, even though he had years of my bloodworks to prove >that test levels had dropped far below my normal levels.)

>If I had the money you can be sure I'd be supplementing myself with >it.

I would still ask around..., but are there inexpensive versions of testosterone out there...like the precursor of it androstiane, the stuff Mark Maguire was taking?

"Civilisation is the encouragement of differences. Civilisation

sci.med.prostate.prostatitis: Re: discomfort after ejaculation thus becomes a synonym of democracy. Force, violence, pressure, or compulsion with a view to conformity, is both uncivilised and undemocratic."

-- Mahatma Gandhi