

Re: AAMT Guided Tour of Online Resources for MTs Class for $5

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2004-07/1081.html>

From: SANDITYPES (sanditypes_at_aol.comshazbot)

Date: 07/15/04

Date: 15 Jul 2004 11:26:34 GMT

>Was this a stated goal? I was not aware of it, but I doubt they will do >that.
>You have to take the test with no references, just as you do the RHIT/RHIA >exams.
>
>Gisele

I've always thought that was a silly way to take a medical transcription test (although usually it's companies testing potential employees where I see it), considering the prominent role references play in the performance of the job. I have no idea about the setup of the test, but I would understand maybe using no reference for a general knowledge portion of a test, but if there is any test about the actual performance of medical transcription, and I certainly hope there is if the test is to have any credibility, then not using references seems to me to leave out a major skill that transcriptionists use.

Sandi