

Re: OT Not politics, for a change

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2004-08/0954.html>

From: The Other Kim (mjg_at_deltanet.com)

Date: 08/03/04

Date: Tue, 3 Aug 2004 10:51:49 -0700

Judity wrote:

> I know I mentioned that Rae told me about Netflix a couple weeks ago, and I > just want to let you know my opinion of it so far. First of all, the two-day > turnaround is holding true.

I've been wanting to try Netflix just so I don't give Blockbuster any more money than is necessary <g>

> Secondly, I'm curious about what you all pay if you go to movie theaters > including the food you buy there. Is it $10 a person or less or, shuddering at > the thought, more than that? Do you think you pay more than $22 a month for > movies?

Oh my goodness, general admission at most theaters here is about $8.50 or $9. A large popcorn will run another $5, a large drink another $5. When you consider that when I go to the movies I generally have a kid or two in tow...it gets kinda pricy.

> Tomorrow, I will probably have the three "Lord of the Rings" DVDs in my > mailbox. Did any of you see them all yet in a theater, and do you think just > these three movies are worth my $22 monthly fee?

Most definitely!!! I paid to see all three of them in theaters, the last one multiple times, and they are so worth it. I bought each one as they were released, including the extended director's cuts. Definitely worth the money, IMNSHO.

I'll have to think a bit on any movies I'd recommend, as others have already mentioned most of the ones I'd suggest.

sci.med.transcription: Re: OT Not politics, for a change

The Other Kim
kimagreenfieldatyahoodotcom