

Re: Dee the liar

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2004-08/4571.html>

---

From: Anne Vasquez (annevasquez\_at\_NOSPAMhotmail.com)

Date: 08/28/04

Date: Sat, 28 Aug 2004 17:56:55 GMT

My feeling is that someone who makes a hurtful post anonymously either doesn't hold that opinion very strongly and just wants to strike out at someone, or they're just plain trying to stir up trouble.

I believe Dee. I don't have any reason not to. However, either way, the whole point she was getting at was the sadness of the tendency in this country these days to assume that someone who appears to be Middle Eastern may be up to no good, simply based on their ethnicity. Heck, even if the story was purely fabrication, the point still stands. Many of us have been guilty of the same fears, and I would certainly hate to be an American of Middle Eastern descent in this day and age. It must be really rough sometimes. I think THAT was where the focus was supposed to be!!

Anne

Becky Young wrote:

> Boy, I don't feel this way at all. I think it comes under the heading of common > decency to own up to your opinion. If you don't like confrontation, keep your > mouth shut.

>

> It is a little like a dog who runs up behind somebody and bites them on the > arse and runs off, to me.

>

> Becky Young

>