

sci.med.transcription: Re: possible to upgrade

Re: possible to upgrade

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2004-09/3202.html>

---

From: CLJ1219 (clj1219_at_aol.com78946321)

Date: 09/14/04

Date: 14 Sep 2004 13:04:15 GMT

>I'm no expert, but no one answered the one question you had and that is if >Home could be upgraded to Pro. According to my XP for Idiots book it is >possible to do that.

Thanks, Barb. That *was* my question. Could it be done. I knew that older versions of Windows could be upgraded but wondered if this one could.

>There are a lot of reasons for an MT to want Pro over Home

Since I don't do MT anymore, there are no MT reasons for it. I've used Office and the "professional" versions of Windows for so long, I've gotten used to them. There are a lot of abilities that Home doesn't have.

>but if you know you want Pro why are you considering buying a computer >with Home?

I'll take either. The computers I have picked out all have Home installed. I can get my daughter to install Pro without a problem but I don't want the hassle of having to wait for a computer. I need the new one up and running ASAP.

>There are lots of computers out there being sold with Pro

I have found a couple of them, but really like the speed and memory better on the ones with Home. Also, like the price (for what you get) better.

Carol

My mind not only wanders, sometimes it leaves completely.