

Re: Early AOL Exit Poll Results–10:00 Pacific

Source: <http://sci.tech–archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2004–11/0563.html>

From: Maureen Galvin (maureen.galvin_at_comcastdotnet)

Date: 11/02/04

Date: Tue, 2 Nov 2004 17:52:20 -0600

"Liz" <lizhug1@mycomcast.net> wrote in message –oQ@comcast.com...
>I agree, Maureen! I love going to the polls. We've lived here 33 years >and > so we know all of the poll workers. It gives me a chance to catch up on > what's going on in their and their children's lives. In fact, even though > there were just a few people in front of us in line, we were there 1/2 > hour
> just chewing the fat. On the other hand, maybe if we had to travel > farther > than 2 blocks and then wait in line once we got there, you and I would > feel > different.
>

Liz, I think that is why I find it so hard to understand. My polling place is literally across the street from me in the park fieldhouse and all of the other places from where I have lived have been no more than 2 blocks. It just seems strange to me is all.

Maureen