

Re: MQ question

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2005-01/0640.html>

From: Anne Vasquez (annevasquez_at_NOSPAMhotmail.com)

Date: 01/07/05

Date: Fri, 07 Jan 2005 17:51:21 GMT

If it's possible for people to do this with their own accounts, then it would be possible with at least some MQ accounts. I've been on the same accounts for years and am as familiar with the docs on those accounts as I ever was with docs when I was an IC. I personally can't do 1500–2000 lines in 3–5 hours, but I never could with my own accounts either. I feel my line counts are much the same as they were when I worked independently, though. Some of the MQ accounts have extensive standards or normals built in, too, and I'm sure that boosts the line counts. That isn't true of the accounts I work on, though.

Anne

JMorgstar wrote:

- > There is an MT bragging on MTdesk that she can do 1500–2000 lines acute care MQ
- > work in 3–5 hours on a consistent daily basis. I don't think it is possible
- > and I said as much. So, I am asking all you MQMTs. Is this possible?
- >
- > I know that this is possible for people doing their own work, as I do it and
- > then some on a daily basis, but I am macroed to the end of the world. I am
- > asking this specifically for acute care and on any of the MQ platforms.
- >
- > Thanks for answering.
- >
- > Janice