

Re: Anyone have a chihuahua?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2005-03/1316.html>

blupencl_at_sbcglobal.net

Date: 03/19/05

Date: Sat, 19 Mar 2005 12:11:02 GMT

My best girlfriend had a chow who was about 8 years old when she had her first baby (that whole thing was one big boondoggle, lol, she was 41).

I was scared to death that dog would maul the baby and warned her proolly 500 times to not let the kid around that dog alone.

She ignored me (she also left the baby in the car at the grocery store though). That dog lived till it was about 15, with Alex wallowing all over him, using him for a TV pillow, smooching him in the face.

I lived on the street behind her. Our back yards touched at a corner and I wouldn't put a leg in that yard over the fence with Miller back there, certain that he would rip my leg to shreds. I drove all the way around to the driveway.

"LizzieB." <blahblah@blahblahblah.com> wrote in message news:3a1no6F68614mU1@individual.net...

> RaeMorrill wrote:

>

>> Remember only too well one of our old AOL members who did a chow rescue >> despite warnings. She was lucky when the dog did snap at her child, no >> harm was done the first time.

>

> I'm not a dog fan. That said, I have never ever EVER met a chow that > wasn't killing mean (and I've met a lot).

>

> Frankly, I think the entire breed should be put down.

>

> --

> LizzieB.

> (who thinks it's interesting Martha Stewart has chows)