Years ago, we used to have a weekly (or thereabouts) MT contest in our live chat room. We had a blast doing it! At times we would have close to 20 people in the room.

I can't remember if it was Melinda or Nancy that was the question giver, but a couple of times when I wasn't being silly and making wisecracks, I actually won the game. We could use any reference we had, and before the 7 pm starting time, I would get my books ready. When I got the Stedman's Electronic Dictionary for DOS, I had many more correct answers.

That was a whole lot of fun, and I sometimes wish we still had it. I think of Arlene, Toni, and several others I can't quite think of the name.

I just use their spell checker. The dictionary looks way cool whenever anyone shows it to me, I resolve to make the purchase, and I just never do. Certainly very handy when working on new accounts I bet.
