I've never figured why one of those overpriced things is any better than a cell phone. It's no harder to press 9-1-1 than to push the button and have someone else do it for you, and the phone lets you call someone else if it's something less urgent.

They are overpriced, but don't you wear the medic alert device around your neck for easy access? If you are truly having a medical crisis, you may not be able to crawl to the phone.
