So you've never in your life had a time when there was any bill you couldn't pay on time.

People are (as usual) jumping to conclusions. I am NOT talking about those who are deadbeats on their rent while sucking down the beer and snorting the rent money up their nose. The way some of y'all seem to think is that nobody ever deserves a break or has an actual hardship.

Funniest thing about this is how this thread started. I was trying to help give Bambi some ideas for help in her landlord situation. If I reacted like some here I'd have ripped her a new one explaining sanctimoniously that she should just pay her rent no matter what. Go figure

Choice my ass! I don't choose for those people not to pay us, and neither does a landlord. It's called being used.
