

Re: Katrina

---

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2005-09/msg00071.html>

---

- From: Neal <nbrown12@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Wed, 31 Aug 2005 19:25:03 -0600
-

The thing that bothers me a great deal is that with all the trashed out lumber around, why people don't build fires on the asphalt and use any kind of container to boil water. The water probably wouldn't taste very good, but if it were boiled, it probably would be safe to drink.

Neal

Judy wrote:

I cannot believe the things that I am seeing on the news. It is almost surreal. Those poor people. In a moment of time they are without everything.

I know people who have lost everything in a fire before, but it was nothing like this devastation. They got put up in a hotel or apartment almost immediately. Not that I am minimizing what one would go through in losing their home and possessions in a fire, but these people down south have no where to go. And not only are they on the streets but the streets are full of water. No food, no water to drink, no way of taking a bath or shower. Everyone just walking around with no where to go, a lot of them not knowing where loved ones are. It is heart wrenching to see what these people are going through.

One news show I was watching, a man came up to a spot that had water in it and filled a plastic jug with that water and was about to drink it when the reporter stopped him and gave him a bottle of clean water.

I can only watch a few minutes at a time because it is much too upsetting. God be with everyone of these people.
Judy

"Donna" <donna@xx> wrote in message

Re: Katrina

news:Xns96C39E7DF5CDBdonnazensewingcom@xxxxxxxxxxxxx

Just got a call from a friend in Northern Alabama. They got hit and are without power, but are fine. Trees are down, but people are apparently okay there.

--

~Donna~

~~~~~

It is never too late to be what you might have been. - George Eliot

Hold on tight to your dream. - ELO

<http://www.zensewing.com>