

Re: Humiliation redefined

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2006-02/msg00315.html>

- From: dianne7619@xxxxxxxxxx
 - Date: 4 Feb 2006 18:47:01 -0800
-

When I was on Atkins I used to buy frozen salmon at Target that was decent. I made a mayonnaise, lemon juice and lots of dill weed sauce that made it taste a little better.

When oldest DD was in high school she dated a boy who was originally from Alaska – they would put the kids in school down here, then the dad would go up for salmon fishing, and when school was out her boyfriend would go up and help fish part of the summer. I went to school with this kid's dad. He married an Eskimo girl and her father had permits for the fishing boats, so he bought one of her dad's boats and they would fish salmon for a few months out of the year and make TONS of money. They used to always bring home boxes of salmon packed in dry ice. They always asked if I wanted any and stupid me, at the time my only experience with salmon was my mother's salmon patties made out of the canned salmon and I think crackers (bleck), so I said no. Oh, if I could just turn the clock back!

Interesting family. The wife's brother is a king crab fisherman. Makes a lot of money, but she's always nervous when he goes. Something happened to the permits and now the husband isn't able to fish anymore, though.

Well now how did I get off on this jaunt? LOL – bored I guess. Oh well I'll leave it and see where it takes us.

usan Mitchell wrote:

Our TJ's has an amazing wine selection, would knock your socks off! Beer as well. They do have amazing stuff. Good stuff too! In the frozen section they have this great salmon that DS got us hooked on. It is salmon stuffed with, darn I knew I'd forget everything but there is dill and something else. DS and DDIL had us over for dinner when we met future in-laws and it was good grilled with new red potatoes and asparagus. Yum.

--

Sue -- Firefighter mom -- Still Rabid UW Dawg Fan!
(to reply send to medlawtrans@xxxxxxxxxx)
"Romy" <Romy.22q7zk@xxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
news:Romy.22q7zk@xxxxxxxxxx

Re: Humiliation redefined

I've been to TJ small stores, and they have good stuff too, like lemon balsamic vinegar or white balsamic. Stuff like that i