After I blocked your emails and MB postings on AOL, I failed to remove your screen name from my PowerTools address book. Unfortunately, this caused you to receive unsolicited email from me for which I do apologize. This oversight has now been corrected, and you have been deleted properly.

As far as my little stories are concerned, I'm simply extending an invitation via a link in my signature lines if someone wants to go and read them. Again, I apologize if this offended you in any way, but I do love to have people drop by there.

Oh, I also understand you're a bit confused about my name. In real life, it's Judith; online, most people call me Judity, but I do answer to Judith when called that by friends.
