

Re: Woman Loses Frozen Embryo Battle

---

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2006-03/msg00728.html>

---

- From: "Sandi" <sanditypes@xxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Tue, 7 Mar 2006 17:32:45 -0500
-

<jmornngstar@xxxxxxx> wrote in message
<news:1141761619.351564.212550@xx>

Having been on one side of this, I just wish this man had learned compassion. Karma is a wonderful thing. Wonder how he will feel 10 years from now when he is married and finds out that he is sterile and gave his up only chance to have a child as well. Fertility is not guaranteed for either party.

Very sad.

Janice

Errr, but, isn't it the exact same thing as a woman deciding not to follow through with a pregnancy? The man is rejecting the potential children in exactly the same way. Sure, they're not in his body, but in this particular instance, why would the woman get to decide everything?

Would you say the same thing about karma if a woman refused to have a man's child because they were no longer together, over the man's objections?

Sandi

.