If the laws are not in place to make a contract binding if the woman tells ex that she will not hold him to child support, then they should be. They must be. I don't think David Crosby (I think that's the one) is paying child support to – oh heck – what's her name – whiskey-voiced rocker – oh yeah – Melissa Ethridge and her girlfriend's child by his sperm.

I know that Phyllis. I hope that this case gets abundant press so that so people might be reminded of what the ramifications are for going ahead without fully understanding everything that could possibly happen.

This woman made one fateful decision that will change her life. I feel sorry for her. Just like the person that isn't paying attention and impacts someone life with something that cannot be taken back.

As I was married, I don't remember what the laws in this country are and what the doctors would or would not have done for money.
