THIS is what has floored me about what I've learned some folks believe Christianity is. Do anything you want with abandon and it's okay because one has Jesus. Long way from the belief that one claims to love God, they do as he asks. Along same lines as I love my husband and therefore I don't run around to bars picking up men for one night (or any night) stands. If I did, I'd be broiled alive here – though it is no different from saying you love God then living your life in opposition to his teachings.

Okay, you and I just disagree on whose job it is to say that about any particular person.
